

This traveling for health is one thing, and for pleasure another; but where a man combines both and finds them, he may be said to be truly lucky. As you are aware, I left Pioche for the benefit of my health and to get some relief for my hand and arm, which have been out of gear since my pony sent me on that prospecting tour to see whether my body or mother earth was the hardest. To say that I solved that problem to my entire satisfaction would be to give you but a faint idea of my convictions on that never-to-be-forgotten occasion. The morning on which I left was very cold, and reminds me of the description which Dr. Kane gave of an Arctic day, when it was so cold that it put a fire out. By Jove! I forgot; it was not the Arctic explorer, but Mark Twain. No matter, it makes little difference. I know it was cold enough to keep me from getting warm, notwithstanding I was covered on the outside with three heavy blankets, fur robes, one pair of felt overboots, fur cap, Russian gloves, and scarfs without number; for an internal covering, four gallons of whiskey, two bottles of brandy, and a plentiful supply of Daniel Boone's best, which has been warranted to set you on fire on, at least, the second position.

That 200 miles to Hamilton seemed to me like 10,000. I arrived in Hamilton more like one of the frozen figures in the ice palace of the Emperor of Russia than a lister of the Holland family. It was with a feeling of pleasure that I learned it was impossible to connect with the stage for Palisade. I promised myself a good toasting by a warm fire, and I kept my promise. Don't think that I am in any way related to the Munchausen family when I tell you that I took five hours to thaw out, and I believe it will have longer, had it not been for searching for internal applications which I took. After a good night's rest, and a hearty breakfast, I took my place behind a spanking team in Woodruff & Ennor's palace sleighs, and started for Eureka. It was a beautiful morning, and a still more beautiful day; but the cold was still intense, and although I was proffered the ribbons, I was obliged to decline, on account of a numbness which was in my arm. Josh Billings would say "it was a bad day for driving," and I am willing to swear by anything Josh says. I was of course compelled to forego the driver's proffered honor. On my arrival in Eureka I was taken in charge by Sheriff Sullivan and Constable Bell, as jolly a pair as ever drank whiskey straight. But Heaven! I hope you don't think I was arrested for any crime, because they took me in charge. Oh no! They merely took the contract to chaperon me around, and show me everything of interest in the town. The first place that Bell escorted me to was the new Court House. (Please bear in mind that I wasn't arrested; a splendid building which has been lately erected. It is very substantially built, and I am seriously inclined to think that the plasterer who did the work on the Eureka Court House might secure a credit if he would visit Pioche, as he did his work so well. You might wait for a very severe earthquake before you would see any of his plastering fall down. There is no necessity for the Judge getting out a policy of Life Insurance; he will never take his quietus by being struck on the head with a political time. Back of the Court-house is the building wherein resides Sheriff Sullivan and all those unfortunate whom the blind goddess has directed should be taken care of. The building has a granite front and has a very strong appearance. Any poor devil who is sent to a night's lodging can be accommodated without costing him a cent. I think of calling on Sullivan next Summer when grass is short, and the managers need foddering up. The County Clerk, Judge Harmon, has a very fine office in the Court-house, with everything well arranged. He evidently understands his business, for he has everything in place and a place for everything. Next to the County Clerk's is the Recorder's office. Our friend Bell being both Recorder and Constable—here everything is in fine shape. He will be willing to wager that Sam could find any record you might name, in the dark, and that, too, without endangering his toes. They have a large fire-proof vault, 10 feet by 6, wherein they keep all the valuable books and records of the county. It is a magnificent vault with two sets of iron doors arched over; it has the patent combination locks, which would defy any burglar outside of prison to open. Within the vault are neatly arranged shelves for the reception of books and papers belonging to the office. The county building cannot be surpassed by that of any other in the State, and when it is taken into consideration that it cost only $10,000 it will be readily seen that builders in Eureka do not go in for making a fortune on one job.

The following is a list of the county officers: Sheriff, John D. Sullivan; Marshal, Deputy, County Recorder, Samuel Bell; County Clerk, F. H. Harmon; County Assessor, C. C. Wallace; County Treasurer, W. A. Seaton; County Surveyor, W. A. Edwards; District Attorney, G. W. Baker; Public Administrator, M. Borowsky; County Superintendent of Public Schools, S. P. Kelly; County Commissioners, D. H. Hall, E. E. Phillips, L. W. Croner; Justice of the Peace, W. J. Gates; Constable, S. B. Bell.

John Gates, who presides in the Police Court, is a very dignified gentleman, and one who can appreciate a joke, and you may judge from the little episode which follows: It seems that a complaint had been entered against some one by a schemer, who alleged that the said some one had stolen a pair of boots. The warrant had been made out and was given to Constable Bell to hunt up the "man who stole the boots." Bell, after a fruitless search for him, was about returning to the court, when I met him; he having, as I informed you, shown me through the said county office, the Constable Sam walks me into the court-room, where his honor, with the judicial dignity of Chief Justice Hale, is awaiting his return.

"Ah! Constable, you found him, did you? Well, we'll attend to his case directly. Go and have the commitment papers made out." I had been looking around the room, innocently examining the Eureka hall of justice. As I turned to look at His Honor I espied Bell going out the door. I started to follow him, when I felt a very heavy hand of His Worship on my shoulder, and he comes back. "What for?" I asked. "Well, we will examine you as soon as the Court returns." "Why, what in a—kind of a pill has Bell been giving you?" I asked him. "I'll give you your pill directly," was his reply; "you can sit over there for the present," saying which he walked up on the rostrum with the tread of a Tancay. I don't know why, but involuntarily I did as he told me. Walking over to the place designated, I sat down, as meek and demure as any victim of misplaced confidence. I had been sitting there long when a gurgling sound behind me attracted my attention. On turning I beheld Bell, almost in convulsions with laughter, and on looking towards the Judge I saw that he was almost black in the face with suppressed mirth. I didn't curse, I didn't swear; but I asked them out to take a drink with the "man who stole the boots." Next day I visited the burnt district with Professor Cassidy, and also the Sentinel office, where I was taken in charge by Dan Morgan who showed me around the establishment. Everything necessary for printing a newspaper, as well as for job work is on hand, and judging from appearances Cassidy must be doing a Land Office business. We wish that he may long continue to do so. After remaining in Eureka for two days, I started for Palisade in one of Woodruff's splendid coaches, and had an opportunity of seeing what work had been done on the Eureka and Palisade Railroad. There is at present over 10 miles of road graded and ready for laying the track. Mr. Salisbury, of the Salt Lake stage line, has charge of the construction. He has 200 men at work, and all are at it like beavers. They expect to have an engine on about the 10th of January. Mr. Woodruff, of the stage line, left for Truckee the same day to purchase sleepers and all the necessary lumber. The managers mean business, and deserve the thanks and encouragement of the traveling public. I arrived in Sacramento in time to witness the great Senatorial contest which was raging between Booth and Farley and which terminated in your favor, as you are aware, in favor of Booth. The Legislature is claimed, and I wouldn't dispute it, to be the ablest that has ever assembled within legislative halls on the Pacific Coast. It is really a fine body of men, and what is more desirable in these times of legislative depravity, as honest looking a body of men as ever I saw collected together. The independent organization of money, and familiarly known "The Dolly Vardens," are very jubilant over the victory of their standard bearer, and well they may, when it is taken into consideration that four short months ago the Independent movement was inaugurated, and without organization or money, and has won two elections throughout the State, and made a United States Senator. To be sure, it had the sympathies and support of all those Republicans who did not believe that Credit Mobiliers and back pay steals, were engrafted as cardinal principles of Republicanism, and of all those progressive Democrats who realize they are living in the year 1873, instead of in the days of Andrew Jackson. This new movement has certainly been the means of purifying politics in California, and it is to be hoped will be the means, to the extent of having wise and needed legislation during the present session. The Capitol building presents a much finer appearance than it did two years ago, when we saw it last. It is now surrounded by a beautiful lawn, and set out with young trees. There are two large fountains in front, in which it is contemplated to put all kinds of miniature fish. Within the Capitol, at the base of the dome, there has been a variegated flagging put down—laid out in prismatic figures like those of the Capitol at Washington. The dome is a splendid affair, and when lit up can be seen on a clear evening at a great distance. The gas jets which surround the dome are lighted up by means of electricity, and are quite a novelty. The architect is still at work putting up the statues which adorn the building. They are principally allegorical, and are well executed; one in particular, which is called "Peace," is a beautiful piece of sculpture, and is said to be from the chisel of Minnie Reams, whose statue of Lincoln has been placed in the National Capitol. We left Sacramento on Saturday last, and arrived in San Francisco that evening.

I will reserve for my next what I heard and saw in the "Golden City." It won't do to send you too much news at once, because then you might get careless of your editorial duties, and the Record would suffer proportionately.
